“Growing up, I was fascinated with the welding industry because my grandfather and cousins were welders. The long history of the profession and the challenge of being a non-traditional student drew me to enroll in the welding program at Bates.

Technical education is like doing what you love, and when I graduate next year, I’d like to work towards becoming either a certified welding inspector or project manager.”

- Allie Ostrander, Welding program student

“After becoming unemployed for the second time within 12 years because of national and global events, I was a 50-year-old frustrated professional with an uncertain future. With the help of Bates' Student Services, along with Worker Retraining and Financial Aid offices, I enrolled in the Cybersecurity program.

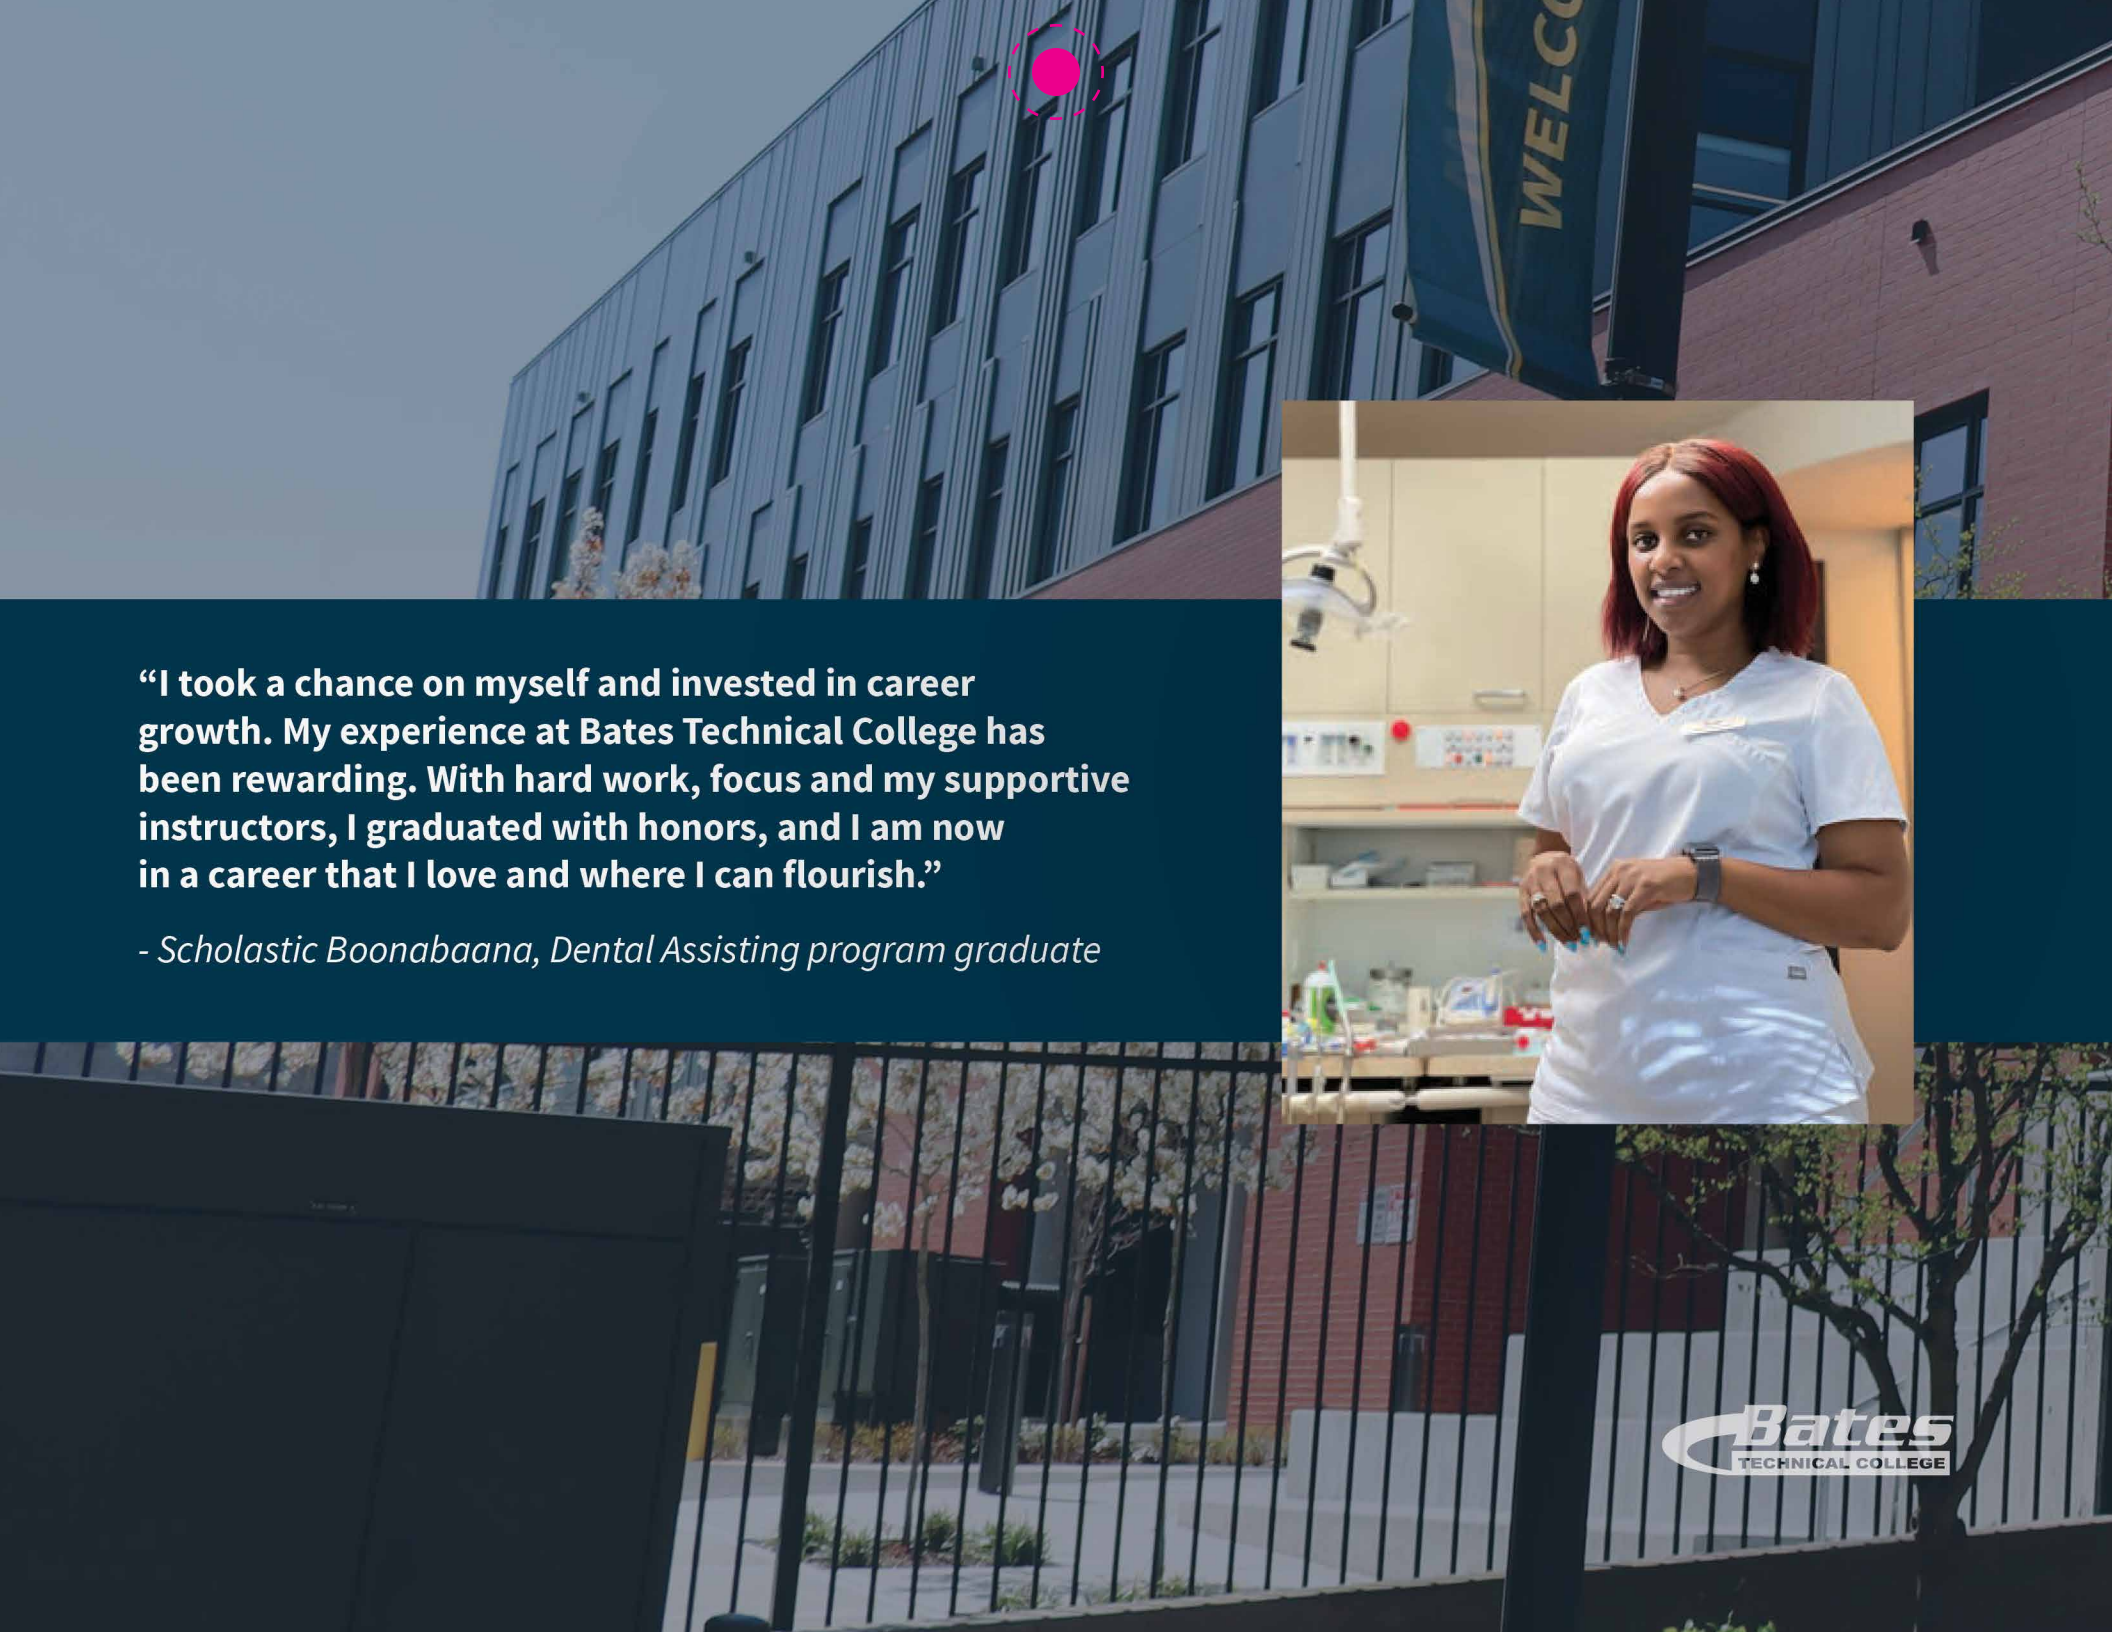

My professors showed immense care for the success of their students through their teachings and inviting industry professionals into our classrooms for informative Q&A sessions. I successfully graduated from the program and am once again excited about my future.”
